About our dogs...

Dogs like Nordic breeds, Labradors, Golden Retrievers, Border Collies, Poodles, etc. are very popular in China, unfortunately often only until they outgrow the puppy stage. Then countless dogs are simply abandoned on the streets, where they are picked up by the police and taken to police stations (without any basic care!!) or captured in a cruel manner by meat trucks and transported to meat farms or directly to the meat market. All of the dogs available for adoption from us have been rescued by animal activists from Bao En Temple Rescue Shanghai, which currently houses over 10,000 dogs of various breeds and types.

All of the dogs are in good health; the health tests required for travel to and from the EU are very strict here, possibly the strictest worldwide. All vaccinations must be up to date, including an 8-in-1 combination vaccine along with a rabies vaccination. A titration test just before departure, as well as deworming and spot-on treatments, are also mandatory.

Before the dogs are transferred to the larger shelter, an initial veterinary health check is conducted at the small intake station of Bao En Temple. They are tested for all contagious diseases such as kennel cough and distemper, as these could potentially lead to a disaster in the larger shelter. If necessary, varying lengths of veterinary treatment and basic immunizations (vaccinations) are administered here before the dogs are moved to the larger shelter.

The temperament of the dogs eligible for international adoption must be free from aggression; otherwise, they unfortunately cannot be considered. For example, a specialized assessment involving interactions with children and compatibility with other dogs is usually conducted. However, tests involving interactions with cats are often not carried out due to the challenge of managing this with nearly 10,000 dogs.

In the final weeks before departure, whenever possible, the dogs are placed in foster care in Shanghai. However, if any unexpected behavioral issues, such as aggression, arise during this time, efforts will be made to find a local adoption option for the dog. This situation has never occurred in the past.

The monks who manage the shelter and the local animal activists closely observe an animal before it is released for adoption. Only after this observation do we, as regional helping hands, receive information about the specific dog, along with a request to find a suitable home for them. 🐕❤️
